

What is the Definition of a Woman?

by Fred R. Coulter

What follows is the definition of a woman. But because a woman is such an amazing creation of God, it cannot be given in a few sentences or a single paragraph. And all of these “woke” people who say they “cannot define a woman” have been so perverted in thought that they do not see the simple truth of God. So, what follows is the definition of a woman based on the truth of God and the truth of known biological laws that God created.

We know that God gave all men and women free moral agency—a mind to think and make choices. He also gave both men and women a wide range of talents and abilities covering a wide range of creativity and inventiveness. And the talents and abilities between men and women do intersect and overlap in some ways, but not all. There are certain things men alone can do in thought, occupation, and ability. And in a similar way, there are certain things that only a woman can do. Thus, this definition will not attempt to describe these differences of innate abilities. Rather, it will address the nature of what a woman truly is.

In the world today, it seems that no one can accurately define what a woman truly is.

God created man after His own image—“man” meaning all human beings, male and female. To demonstrate the closeness of a woman to a man, He took a rib from Adam and formed the woman and brought her to him—on the 6th day of creation. Adam named her woman because she came from man. Later, when she gave birth to Cain and Abel, she was called Eve (Hebrew for life) because she was the mother of all human life.

Scientifically, we can look back and see what God did. He made the male the progenitor, and his sperm is the seed of new life. God created in the man the ability to produce two chromosomes, which are labeled as X and Y chromosomes. The woman, however, was created to produce ovum within her body—with only the X chromosome. The X chromosome is for female, the Y being for male. This is all scientific fact, and always will be.

God ordained that man and woman would become “one flesh.” Thus the first wedding ceremony was performed by God in the Garden of Eden. God then declared that for all future generations a man should leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife—that they should be “one flesh” through the sexual union. God made the human sex drive powerful enough to guarantee that the next generation would be produced. God also made it clear that all deviant forms of sexual activity are contrary to His design, as noted Leviticus 18 and 20, etc. Today, as in all past civilizations, living contrary to the laws of God concerning human sexuality will automatically bring curses—for perverse sexual activity will profoundly affect the mind and emotions, so that those involved will become unable to think correctly.

In human sexual union, the male injects millions of sperm cells into the woman—each one carrying X or Y chromosomes. When a sperm cell with the X chromosome unites with the ovum from the woman (with an X chromosome), this produces a female. When the ovum is penetrated by the Y chromosome, a male is produced. So all women have their origin through their father’s X chromosome. Likewise for men, except it is through the father’s Y chromosome. This is how it has been from creation. And it will never change.

So let's get to the definition of a woman.

We find from Scripture that God uniquely made women to carry the newly impregnated life, to nourish it during its gestation period from conception to birth 9 months later. This takes place in the placenta, which only develops upon pregnancy. Oxygen and nutrients pass from the mother through the placenta to the developing infant—in a watery environment called amniotic fluid. All of this occurs automatically, according to God's genetic design. You can read more about this in our book From a Speck of Dust to a Son of God.

The sex of the child is sealed at the instant of conception. There is only male and female; and after the infant is born, it remains male or female. So-called modern science cannot change these facts of human life. Attempts to do so only reflect a demented mind.

And God did not give this childbearing ability to men. So the latest fad, that men can give birth to children, is nothing but a satanic delusion (which men will learn when they foolishly try to make it happen).

Every child born is the “one flesh” of the father and mother—literally fulfilling the Word of God that the husband and wife shall “become one flesh.” With every child, half of the genes come from the father and half come from the mother. Thus, children are the “one flesh” of their father and mother—and together they are a family, as created by God.

The woman was specially created by God to be a “helper” for the man, her husband. He made her with different emotions than the man—more emotional, in fact. He made her to naturally desire to nurture and take care of others, primarily her own offspring.

God also designed the woman to be able to produce milk to feed the newborn. In most cases, the mother feeds the infant for many months, even up to three years. Only a woman can produce this milk, designed specially for her offspring. In nursing the baby, she is the one who is in the loving position of caring for, and talking to, and loving and caressing the new baby. These emotional qualities are uniquely built into women; men do not have them to the same degree.

God made the man to work, to provide for the family, and most of this work requires him to be outside the home. So the woman has been made to take care of the home and to take care of the children—to teach them, to nourish them. The Bible says that, compared to the man, she is the “weaker vessel.” Thus, men do all the heavy work: the hunting, the building, the mining, anything that requires considerable strength. Women can do some of these things, but they were not designed by God for heavy work.

So the woman is a special creation of God, literally the other half of the family—the father being the head, and the woman being the helper and the mother of the children. Women have special talents that most men do not have: they are able to create and fashion things useful for living, and to make attractive and comfortable living spaces. They are also good at creating a loving and peaceful environment for the husband and children (see Proverbs 31).

The woman is also co-heir with the husband to eternal life. As the children grow up and leave home to start their own families, she is able to dedicate more time to drawing closer to God and to understanding His word. Yet she continues to help educate her grown children—and then her grandchildren. She also has the time to expand her talents and abilities.

This is how God has created women—with their unique abilities and emotions. And when life is lived as God has shown in His word, He blesses the whole family—father, mother, and children. And when the children have grown up and are married and have their own children, the cycle repeats itself—with a new generation. So, without man and woman, we are only one generation from extinction.

The truth is, the world can't get along without men, and it can't get along without women. This is all by God's design—for His great and awesome plan for humankind.

Thoughts About Scientific Attempts of Transgender Men Having Children

Modern science is trying to prove that men can give birth. And in their attempt to do so, they must find a man willing to take untold amounts of female hormones and undergo surgical operations designed to change his bodily makeup so that he could “become pregnant.” But in doing this, the man is no longer a man, because he has been physically, chemically, and hormonally altered. He’s neither man, nor woman, but a freak.

So these “scientists” would need to take an ovum from a woman, impregnate it with sperm, and insert it into the body of a “transformed” man—in hopes that it would develop into a human infant.

However, this “man” would not have the physical structure or the specific muscles needed to deliver an infant. So they would have to perform a Caesarean procedure to extract the infant—if it could be developed to the point of birth.

Clearly, this is all a demented experiment by Satan-inspired men who deny the Creator God. In fact, such men think they are God! Such defiance of what God has ordained may be a key factor in the demise of this country—along with all the other deceptive ideas and practices perpetrated by our leaders on American society.

And now the CDC is promoting transgenderism. Why? Because there are numerous queers working for the U.S. government, and being bold in their assertions is one way to get new queer converts.
